Yankees Play Fifteen-Inning Tie Game

Sub Umpires Make a Hit Despite Heat

Yanks and Browns Satisfied With Mike Donlin and "Two Bits" Bierhalter

By Charles A. Taylor

The New York Yankees and the St. ouis Browns played a fifteen inning eddest game ever contested under Coogan's Cliff. In the first place the ate of the game itself was hanging over the cliff, and the players and fans were on the old qui vive for any news

In the second place no umpires had appeared on the field at 3:30, the time set for the start of the game. The state Manager Huggins and the state Manager Huggens and the equally estate Jim Burke, director of the destinies of the Browns wherever they may lead him, finally wearied of the boos they were receiving from the thousand fans present and called a conference under the shadows of the managers had a perfect right to choose a player from each team to replace the missing arbiters. But someone suggested from the press box as the conference opened that the famous Mike Donlin was a spectator, as well as Marty McHale, author of "Close-Ups," and once a pitcher for the Red Sox and the Yankees.

of Huggins as his choice, but Burke said he had a real umpire in the person of "Two Bits" Bierhalter, trainer of the Browns. The demon statisticans among the scribes and pharisees at once got busy, and the information that "Two Bits" when in his heyday had served as umpire in the minors for some twenty years was the harvest the lowest the constitution of the said of the said

Facts and Fancies

By LOUIS LEE ARMS.

Hot Weather, Here and There

HE majority of our tourists never fail to assure me that St. Louis is the hottest town in the United States; and maybe it is, next to New York. I think there are more things here to make you hot. Still, Los Angeles never will have to take off its thermometer to any one. It was pretty hot out there. I remember one day when an asphalt paved street melted and ran pell mell down hill and out into the country, carrying with it a lot of Fords and peanut wagons. In those days a Ford could do anything but swim. I understand the newer ones can do that. A citizens' committee was organized to go out and bring back the street, but it melted, too. Yes, it was pretty hot out there.

If worst came to worst in St. Louis one could always sleep in the bathtub. One had only to half fill the tub with cold water. The great danger in this lay in the fact that during the night the water might begin to boil and fatally scald the sleeper. Still, those of us who tried it knew there was small chance of one sleeping in a tub. Personally, I never saw an asphalt street melt in St. Louis, but I can't say the same for a keg of-say, Budweiser!

El Paso is one of the few towns I know where the heat goes to the feet; that is, exclusively to the feet. The rare air I suppose accounts for that. A man might be comfortable as you please north of his hip pockets, but the heat and the sidewalks certainly evened up on his feet. Feet in El Paso on a hot day are either fried or boiled. The advantage in the first is that it is not necessary to remove the foot

Sidewalk Cooking

HAVE heard it said that you could fry an egg on the sidewalk in El Paso, but no one ever made much of that. I did know a man who was proud of the fact that he once baked an angel's cake on the stone steps leading to his veranda. The trouble was he let the cake bake too long and it was burned.

New York seems to be jealous of these cities, and when it gets started it tries to do in a day or two that which takes Los Angeles, St. Louis and El Paso weeks of practice. In the matter of sheer enthusiasm the heat in New York is superior, but it has no staying powers. The thermometer in front of the World Building will always weaken. It isn't such a bad boy as it would like to have us believe.

I remember that last winter I often risked freezing an ear to stop and watch that thermometer.

"I am ten below," said the thermometer, "and before I get through with you birds I'm going to freeze your feet off. Just paste your

Overboastful

BUT the thermometer did nothing of the kind. In a few days he recovered his equanimity and spirits and was back again at his customary 40 degrees.

"I was only kidding," he said apologetically. "Had something that didn't agree with me.'

So yesterday when I beheld him sputtering around at 90 degrees I took it not too seriously. He was as boastful as ever, when on these sprees, and I heard him address a bystander:

"Look at me, for this ain't anything to what I'm going to do to

No finer list of cash prizes and trophies has ever been offered for a show ring competition. The leading one of the array is a cup valued at $500 offered by the Patten Line for the best gig horse, and his qualifications must be suitability for work to be designated, all-around action, manners and conformation and pace to count. The present holder of the trophy, which, by the way, must be won three times by the same owner before it becomes his personal property, is Button Wood Lass, a slashing mare, the property of the Buttonwood Farms. The mare has two legs on the trophy.

Reginald C. Vanderbilt figures high among the donators of substantial prizes. He has favored the four-inhand harness horses, to be shown to a coach or body brake, with a prize of $50. There is a bit of a novelty about this contest in the fact that the exhibitors need not describe their terms, but all horses must be owned by the exhibitors need not describe their terms, but all horses must be owned by the exhibitors at the time of the entry. The ponies shown in differen rigs and traps to the number of four clases have come in for Vanderbilt patronage to the amount of about $150. Prizes have also been given by J.
